Taking pictures with your new DSLR (Digital Single-Lens Reflex) Camera is easy, just set it on Auto and shoot away! BUT, capturing better pictures with your new DSLR... that's harder.

Quality photography starts with understanding how to set your exposure manually. This is NOT difficult to do. This 3-hour workshop covers aperture and shutter speed and you learn how to adjust them on your camera.

Next, we discuss how to use these settings to create the image you want. Bracketing the exposure is a very key part of and will set you on the right path.

We also cover the use of polarizers and capturing images in the RAW format.
